Understanding Congress

A Seminar on The Legislative Process

Wednesday, March 19, 1980

8:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. at The Madison Hotel, Washington, D.C.

The Washington Monitor offers an information-packed seminar which introduces you to the real "working" world of Congress. It is designed to make you more effective and valuable in your job. This half-day intensive course gives you the tools you need to use daily in dealing with the Congress. The seminar is designed for the beginner, but those with some experience and even the "old hands" find it a valuable refresher course. There has been an enthusiastic response from many companies and agencies which regularly use the seminar as basic training for their staff. Please make your reservations early.

the agenda includes

- Congressional Leadership — party leaders and organizations, committee assignments, power centers in the leadership chain of each chamber.
- The Path of Legislation — everything from the origins and introduction of legislation to hearings, markups, reports, floor action, amendments, voting, conference committees, presidential options, and more . . .
- Resource Tools & Staff Checkpoints — identifying the most useful and reliable reference tools; which staffers to call and what questions to ask.

who should attend

- congressional staff people
- legal assistants and paralegals
- congressional liaison people
- research assistants
- embassy personnel
- government relations representatives
- secretaries in congressional liaison offices
- and anyone whose legislative tracking skills may need refreshing

reference manual

Each participant receives the reference manual written especially for the course. It contains all the information presented orally during the seminar, but in greater detail. Plus chapters on useful resources and the congressional budget process, a glossary and bibliography — all of which make it a valuable tool in itself.

faculty

This dynamic course is presented by the Editors of The Congressional Monitor. We avoid the ho-hums of academic theory and the civics class. Instead you benefit from our daily experiences and frustrations in staying on top of congressional scheduling. In the seminar, we use current Capitol Hill events and situations to illustrate points and procedures. And we enjoy fielding questions relating to particular problems you may have in coping with the legislative process.

We do not tell you how to influence legislation. We will tell you how to monitor it, how to understand the twists and turns a bill may take on its way to passage. And we'll tell you about the most useful information resources available.
